Captain Hollowell graduated from Oakland City University with honors and possesses a Master's degree in Management. Captain Hollowell is also a Master Instructor certified in a number of areas with his primary duty being Director of In-service and Regional Training Programs.

Class Overview

This course is designed to familiarize officials from different disciplines with their role during an active shooter event and the roles of others as they carry out their part of the mission. Having a vision of the "big picture" will help develop an understanding of how agencies can work together in order to limit loss of life and property during a significant event such as an active shooter.

Individuals will be given the opportunity to "exchange roles" during scenario based training exercises. There will also be lecture covering key issues concerning roles of different individuals in such areas as establishing perimeters, building clearing, establishing policy and other critical areas.

Non-law enforcement will be encouraged to take part in some of the functions normally performed by police to give them insight into how important their role may be during this critical time of an active shooter event. Law enforcement will likewise be encouraged to be involved in controlling students during a lockdown in the role of an educator.

Training will also be provided in areas of personal survival such as identifying cover/concealment, what to do if caught in the open, identifying signs of impending danger, weapons identification and a number of other issues that could save a life. Small things can make a huge difference in how an event plays out, but without proper training chances of a positive outcome certainly dwindle.

Training Objectives:

Explain purpose and function of both law enforcement and educators in an active shooter event
Demonstrate the movement of an entry team
Explain purpose of an inner/outer perimeter
Describe events that may be confused with an active shooter event
Explain why it is important to “talk in the clear” during an active shooter event
Identify the signs of a person carrying a concealed weapon
List five actions that may save your life during an active shooter event

Requirements and Precautions

This is a two day training course, involving active participation. Day one of the course will consist of classroom learning, including planning for the safe and successful completion of an active shooter exercise. Day two will include role play in a facility serving as a school. Participants will have the opportunity to play the role of students, school staff, active shooter, and as law enforcement utilizing non-lethal training guns and ammunition. Safety gear will be utilized and other precautions will be implemented, however this will be a full scale exercise involving physical activity and stressful situations. Participants will be required to sign a waiver along with registration. All participants must attend the first day of training and safety review in order to participate in the second day exercise.

Cost: There is no cost for this training. Professional Growth Points, CEU’s and Law Enforcement hours will be available.
